I. Introduction

The early trace of women entrepreneur can be found in the seventeenth century, Dutch homesteaders who came worked under a matriarchal society. In this overall population, various women procured money and lands, and through this inheritance, became business people.

In Babylonia, around 200 B.C., women were permitted to partake in business and to work as recorders. By fourteenth century, in England and France, women were as regularly as conceivable recognized. In 1950, women made up just about 25 percent of both mechanical and organization zones of the farming countries. In 1980, it extended to 28 percent and 31 percent independently. In the meantime, in 1950, 53 percent of females and 65 percent of folks of industrialized countries were in non-country zones. Due to the budgetary crisis of the 1980s and the commercialization and modernization of the economy, women lost work in agribusiness and organizations. This pushed women in metropolitan regions to find a proper response for creating pay, which achieved the ascent of free work, generally in little associations in the easygoing territory. Criticalness of Women Business Women play out a huge capacity in building the certified spine of a nation's economy. There is huge ambitious capacity among women. Various women's local aptitudes, for instance, people and time the heads and family arranging are direct versatile in the business setting.

Miri Lerner Et.al(1997), the author took 200 Israeli women-owned businesses. Had identified the factors which influence women entrepreneur are Social Learning Theory, Human capital, motivation and goals, Networks, Demographics and environmental factors.

Helene Ahl (2006). The author opines that the research need to be done on the area of studies of how social orders are gendered and of the mechanisms by which this gendering is reconstructed and Studies of how women entrepreneurs construct their lives and their businesses, how they “do gender”.

Sue Birleyet .al. (1987), This paper analyzes the characteristics of male and female participants attending pioneering entrepreneurship development programs. The participants do not need to have the formal education, business plan and finance available to start the business. But they need to have reasonably feasible idea. The results show significant differences between the characteristics of the male and female entrepreneurs, and the businesses which they form.

Michael H. Morris et al.(2006) the author took 102 sample of female entrepreneurs to assess motives, obstacles, goals and aspirations, needs, and business identity. The in-depth and follow up survey in terms of quantitative finding, growth orientation was associated with whether a woman was “pushed” or “pulled” into entrepreneurship, was motivated by wealth or achievement factors, had a strongwomen’s identity in the venture, had equity partners, and believed women faced unique selling obstacles. The qualitative research made clear that modest- and high growth entrepreneurs differ in how they view themselves, their families, their ventures, and the larger environment. The results of both stages suggest that growth is a deliberate choice and that women have a clear sense of the costs and benefits of growth and make careful trade-off decisions.

SiwanMitchelmore et.al (2013), The paper focus on – Entrepreneurial competencies have an impact on firm performance and growth. The purpose of this paper is to report empirical research into the entrepreneurial competencies reported by female entrepreneurs who are committed to the growth of their business. The results reveals that Four main clusters of competencies were identified are personal and relationship, business and management, entrepreneurial, and human relations competencies.

DimaJamali (2006) the paper to examine the interplay of constraints and opportunities affecting female entrepreneurship in developing countries. The paper integrates salient micro- and macro-level perspectives and provides a rounded account of opportunities and constraints as part of a holistic interdependent system. The results reveals that clearly illustrate the relevance of micro- and macro-level factors in entrepreneurship research and the usefulness of integrating multiple lens and units of analysis to capture the complexity of the women entrepreneurship experience in any particular context.
